This issue of "The Collector" marks a first in comic fandom. I'm proud to announce that "The Collector" is the first fanzine to ever feature an in-depth, fully illustrated interview with fandom's most popular artist, our own John G. Fantucchio. I greatly hope you enjoy this issue, because all of us (especially John) have worked very hard to make this one, big, special issue. For this I feel indebted to John and all the other great guys who were good enough to take their time to contribute.

If you'll recall, last issue I mentioned my visit to John G. Fantucchio's home. Well, I thought you might be interested to know that on November 2nd I was greatly honored to receive a visit from John and his wife Mary. John brought with him all of the artwork and layouts for this issue along with a few illustrations he permitted me to keep in my collection. We had a nice, long visit in which I showed John my work area (of which he said he was greatly impressed), some of my older comics from my collection, some of my artwork, and a few other items which seemed to interest him. I was fortunate enough to arrange for Mr. Prince to meet John and give him and Mary a tour of the shop, which I'm sure they enjoyed. Later on we snapped a few photos and went out to dinner. I was glad to hear that John enjoyed his visit here, and I hope that he and I will be able to visit each other more in the near future.

I wish to thank John once again for all of his help with this issue. I'm sure you'll agree that the artwork and photography John did for the interview is among some of the finest work he's done for fandom.)

At present, we are in need of good WRITERS! So, if you are a writer, I would appreciate a sample of your work.

I thought you might like to know that John G. Fantucchio, aside from everything else he did for this issue, helped me plot this issue's Hyperman strip and also designed Hyperman's new costume. Again I thank him!!

That's it for now. Till January, 1969. Happy Holidays!!
This is an EXCLUSIVE interview with fandom's most popular artist, John G. Fantuccchio. This interview took place a few weeks ago, by mail and in person, and was conducted by the editor, Bill G. Wilson. This is, we believe, the first article of this type about John to come out of fandom. No doubt there will soon be more. But, because we've been first, we think this interview will answer many of the questions you've asked about John, and will provide interesting and informative reading for all of you readers.

BGW: Well, John, I guess I should begin this interview by asking you when you became interested in comics, and the type you collected.

JGF: Well, Bill, I would say around 1946 or 47; at that time I collected mainly Superman, Batman, Captain Marvel, Daredevil, and The Spirit.

BGW: Speaking of comics, what do you think of "The Second Heroic Age of Comics", better known as the comic industry in the 60s? In your opinion, are today's comics better or worse than those of the Golden Age; considering script, artwork, printing quality, and amount of pages?

JGF: "The Second Heroic Age of Comics" is probably producing better drawn, better written books with much more thought behind them. Marvel Comics has given the comic industry a well needed shot-in-the-arm; it's a shame that a few companies have tried to mimic their style rather than searching for a new approach in visual communication. What we would all like to see, of course, is more pages; but with the never-ending rise of cost, it's impossible. The 12¢ comic book is still the greatest value - entertainment-wise and creativity-wise - in the world today. Where else can you get so much talent, so many illustrations, and a wide range of composition for a dime and two pennies?

BGW: When did you first become interested in drawing, and what did you learn to draw first?
From a strange temple in far off Tibet, an almost forgotten tongue answers the words of the most powerful magic formula in the world, changing wealthy JETHRO DUMONT into THE MAN OF STRENGTH...

THE GREEN LAMA!

have been individualists and highly creative: Kubert, Ditko, Meskin, Raboy, Crandell, Williamson, Eisner, Kirby, Raymond, Fester, Wood, Frazetta, Adams, Hogarth, Kane. All these men have had a great deal to say in their work, but perhaps the one whom I really relate to the most is Alex Raymond. (I must agree. Raymond is truly one of comicdom’s greatest artists)

BGW: Offhand, how many comics would you say you have in your collection?

JGF: No comment.

BGW: Are there any particular years or companies that you collect?

JGF: I'm just trying to complete a few titles - almost anything by Mac Raboy, Captain Marvel Jr. especially; Superman - I just need a few of these; Batman, Captain Marvel, The Spirit, works of Frazetta, early Jack Kirby; and EC comics, of course. If there's anyone out there who has original artwork by Mac Rayboy, I'd like to hear from him.

BGW: What company, in your opinion, has put out some excellent stories and exceptional artwork? Tarzan by Manning was superb, as was Robot Fighter; Torak has been magnificently executed all these years, and the same artist, Giotitti, has handled many other titles - Gunsmoke, Have Gun Will Travel, Jungle Jim, a terrific job on Tonto - he's definitely one of my favorites, and it seems to me he's received no recognition in fandom, which is really a shame. One would be wise to study his work.
Perhaps DC might have the edge right now, with Neal Adams doing so much of their work. I think his work will be sought after in years to come as the best contemporary style; he's fresh and has tons of imagination, beautiful composition and perspective. Marvel has perhaps too many disciples of Kirby, but the two that really turn me on at Marvel at this moment are John Buscema and Gene Colan; these two are completely different from each other and the rest of the bull pen; perhaps the reason I like Buscema's work is that he's following in the footsteps of Burne Hogarth and Gil Kane.

BGW: Just one more question, John, before we close. What, in your opinion, is the best all-time comic strip ever published.

JGF: I've got to say Flash Gordon. ((So do I)) You've really got to see all of Raymond's work and study it intensely; you can see the different things that he's tried to do with Flash with his accentuated lines, facial expressions, his beautiful use of solid blacks; and story-wise you never really get tired of reading it. I think anyone who has seen the Nostalgia Press book or has access to some very early strips - around 1936 - can see for himself the high quality of draftsmanship. Take a look at some of your older comics and compare some of the illustrations from the early Flash Gordon, and you'll be able to see how many imitators there were at that time, and even now. Today we have men like Williamson, Starr, MacWilliams, Wood, Atkins, and a host of others who have been inspired and influenced by Flash Gordon and the works of Alex Raymond. Perhaps the only other man who can equal him is Harold Foster. He's still drawing as well now as he was 30 years ago, although his work is in the tradition of the old school of illustrators, beginning with Howard Pyle who today is known as "the father of American illustration." If you're lucky enough to come across some of Pyle's books that he wrote on King Arthur, pirates, and Robin Hood, you can see how Foster was greatly influenced by this man.

BGW:

THANK YOU, JOHN, FOR A MOST INFORMATIVE AND INTERESTING INTERVIEW; AND BEST OF LUCK ON ALL OF YOUR FUTURE ENDEAVORS.

JGF:

IT'S BEEN MY PLEASURE, BILL. I CAN'T REMEMBER WHEN I'VE ENJOYED ANYTHING SO MUCH; AND PERHAPS SOME DAY YOU'LL LET ME WRITE AN ARTICLE FOR YOU AS WELL AS FEATURING MY ILLUSTRATIONS.

Sometimes these guys will give you their collections outright, or at least let them off cheap. If you have to pay as much as fifteen cents each, you are still saving tremendously, as well as building up good relations since your friend will be glad to make a profit. If only he knew...!

I do not recommend buying complete sets from dealers. It costs too much. As I have outlined, the only way is to inherit freises a collection or pick them up locally as cheaply as you can. Trades can even be worked: I traded off thirteen Doc Savage books for about a dozen Tales Of Suspense, several Actions, and 75¢, for example. The time to patronize dealers is for scattered back issues to fill gaps you cannot fill in after you've exhausted every single local source. Then read over dozens of ads to get an idea of pricing for not only the comics you want, but for all comics in general. The information will prove handy many times when you may not have any source material on hand. Then check dealers for prices on an individual basis. You may be watchful, and when somebody gets drafted or suddenly loses interest and dumps his collection on the market, you can pounce and pick up some fine bargains. However, perhaps the best practice is to patronize small dealers who offer good condition comics and speedy service. Their prices may be higher than amateur dealers who put out ads with pages of smeary printing and incredibly detailed single issuing, pricing, and conditioning, but service is better, and if they offer single prices for each individual issue in guaranteed good to mint condition, ordering for what you want is easier. These smaller dealers are anxious to please and undercut rather viciously the prices of the big boys like Held and Rogofsky.

Never pay too high a price for a comic, but again it is wise to pay a little more to get good comics. Sometimes, when you find a reliable dealer with rational prices and fast service, it pays to show your appreciation by ordering most of your needs from him. Dealers like him often pay back their regular customers with free comics, discounts on large orders, and even advance word on their latest acquisitions for sale. If you're a friendly and good-natured, comic book dealing will be quite enjoyable, and the benefits worth the time and trouble.

Now for a word on the most important aspect of the entire business: condition of comics. I can offer only one bit of advice: never buy anything but the best. You are putting perhaps hundreds of dollars in your collection, so why cheapen it by buying poor condition comics just because they cost less? Pay a little more if you have to; it'll be worth it.

Of course, this is for your main collection, or your favorite comics. Most everybody has another section of their collection for "crudies". Here is where you might cheapen up. The cover of a comic is such an integral feature of a comic that while you should never settle for a coverless comic in your serious collection, you can relax in your crudies, load up on cheap old comics sans covers and settle down for a lot of corny reading pleasure. Often you can buy dozens of coverless in a single bulk package for little more than the postage from dealers or collectors with lack of room, and if these are titles you would like to read but either do not care to or cannot pay mint with cover prices for them, by all means stock up. Once in a while it's possible to get a hold of detached covers and staple them back

Dear Bill: Once again, you have come through with another very good (close to excellent covers it better) issue of The Collector (#12). I was glad to find out that someone (Duffy Vohland, in: "NEW: The Spectre and The Creeper") prefers Adams' ((Neal Adams)) art over Anderson's Fury" was, although not mentioned as such, a rebuttal to the Sgt. Fury article of a couple issues back ((TC#9)) Bob Stump is, in my eyes, an expert on both titles, qualifying very well as the right one to write such an article.
True, Sarge Rock is the best all-time war strip...I truly enjoyed the rest of the articles and both covers.

MARTIN L. GREIM/Box 132/Dedham, Massachusetts 02026

Dear Bill: I rather liked issue #12 of TC, but I do have one criticism.
First, why give a rundown on the latest comics? By the time you go to press most people have already bought and read the issues. That's why I've stayed away from that type of thing in The Comic Crusader. Sure, if you like a particular issue, say so---but to review something most fans are aware of is a waste of space...I like your zine Bill. It's one of the few around today that shows promise.

((Thanks for your comments, MLG. I've taken into great consideration what you and others have said about the news col, and I think you'll find a change for the better in this issue's edition. As far as TC showing promise, among few in fandom, let's not forget your zine either, MLG. You have to admit it's got what it takes to become one of fandom's finest)))
Dear Bill: It's about time I made my comments on "The Collector" #11, so that's what I intend to do now. The front and back covers were very well done by John R. Weibel, and the editorial, as usual, was exactly what an editor should be. "Foreign Comics: U.S. Competition?" was excellent. It was informative without being boring. Bud Fern's and Mike Robertson's illustrations were very good, but John Fantacchio's artwork, as in issue #10 of TC, was the best. The Superboy satire, in my opinion, was a waste of space, and the artwork accompanying it was at the very best. Tom Christopher's very good to excellent drawings formed a sharp contrast to Mark Ellis' Superman drawing which I only considered fair. The reproduction of the All Winners #1 cover was excellent. The drawing beside the ad for "Sword and Sorcery" was very poor. The "Hypermans" comic strip, although it had it's good points, just wasn't good enough to be printed in TC. (I think you'll find this issue's Hypermans strip a vast improvement) "News and Views" was excellent. If you ever stop this feature, you're making a terrible mistake. (Who ever said anything about stopping it?) The ad put out by Larry Heller had terrible artwork. Unless the artwork, if there is any in an ad, is at least good, please don't allow the ad to be printed. Your printing has improved, but there were still parts of Bill Schelley's ad that ended up being printed faintly. (Due, partially, to the light original) Like in issue #10, #11 was very good with an improvement in printing being a big factor in the overall betterment of "TC".

THE COMIC BOOK SCENE: DC: It's a shame, but it looks as though Beware the Creeper will be discontinued in a few issues. I think it's a mistake, and I hope that DC's editorial staff sees fit to change their minds. Deadman will be temporarily discontinued until a better and more suitable place can be found for it. In the meantime, Strange Adventures will be reprinting Adam Strange and Atomic Knights material. After a few more issues (or possibly even sooner) DC will be cutting their giants from 80 to 64 pages because of the current economical problems. Marvel. The next issue of Marvel Super-Heroes will feature Ka-Zarr. As you probably already know, Jack Kirby has dropped Captain America so that he can spend more time on the Fantastic Four and Thor. Steranko is doing the artwork now, which, I must say, is some of his best. Duffy Vohland informs me that the Banshee will be brought back soon and that the inhumans will be getting their own book soon.

SHADES OF SERIALS DEPT.: Our local radio station, WTAI in Pittsburgh, is currently featuring a "Chickensman" radio serial Monday through Friday at 11:30 AM. It's pretty funny, and worth listening to, if you're able to. One of his 'famous' quotes is: "Remember kiddies! The best way to prevent forest fires is to stay out of forests!"

THE ALLEY AWARDS: About this time, the Alley Award ballots are being sent out. I encourage you to cast your vote and to encourage your friends also. I'd also appreciate your vote for "The Collector", but that's up to you. But remember, no matter how you vote, the awards COULD depend on YOU. (Our thanks to Mark Dillman for permitting us to use the first daily phantom comic strip from his collection.)
“TO START ANEW”

BASED ON AN IDEA BY JOHN G FANTUCCHIO

IT HAS BEEN BUT 3 DAYS SINCE SCIENTIST RICHARD HARRIS GAINED HIS ASTOUNDING ATOMIC POWERS THROUGH THE LAB EXPLOSION AND VOWED TO USE HIS NEW-FOUND POWERS FOR THE GOOD OF HUMANITY. DUE TO HIS HAUNTING GUILT OF THE ACCIDENT, HE HAS GONE TO A SMALL TOWN

THE STAR PRESS
LAB EXPLOSION KILLS 10
A few days ago a freak explosion killed 10 lab technicians & scientists near Kennedy, Florida. The bodies of all 10 persons were totally mangled, due to intense radiation. The 11th person, scientist Richard Harris, known the world over for his magnificent scientific achievements, has yet to be found. There was little does anyone realize that I killed my associates, I was to make sure that absolutely nothing was to happen to the atomic generators, yet through my ignorance, they caused the explosion, and, through a freak accident, the radiation endowed me with the power to turn my body into a mass of atomic energy at will and to hurl bolts of energy from my eyes & hands. Although my guilt will linger, I can not but believe.

THAT I WAS GIVEN MY POWERS FOR A REASON; TO MAKE UP FOR THE TRAGEDY I CAUSED, AND TO HELP HUMANITY AS BEST I CAN. I MUST LEARN TO FORGET AND WAIT! WHAT'S THIS ABOUT A CONSPIRACY AGAINST THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT?

THIS ARTICLE PROVES THAT THE EXPLOSION MIGHT HAVE BEEN PLANNED BY A CONSPIRACY AGAINST THE U.S. MAYBE--HMM... MAYBE HYPERMAN SHOULD LOOK INTO THIS!

LOOKS LIKE A RICKUS DOWN THERE! I BETTER TRANSFORM MYSELF TO RAW ATOMIC ENERGY, SO THAT I'LL APPEAR INVISIBLE TO THE PEOPLE BELOW!

BLAZING ANGER, THE ATOMIC AVENGER LASHES OUT AT THE UNSUSPECTING HOODS

BY THE TIME THEY WAKE UP, THEY WON'T KNOW WHAT HIT THEM!
I still can't figure out who those guys were and why they were here. Can there be some connection between them and that article? Maybe--cough--oh no! Someone must have thrown a fire bomb! The place is going up in smoke and--cough--I'm choking! I better find a way out of here fast, or I'll be a goner! Maybe if I use my energy to zoom up out of here I can catch my breath. Well, guess there's nothing else I can do here.

Once I get up high enough, I'll be able to catch my breath and get out of here! Good gosh! My costume has caught on fire! The heat is almost unbearable! I better get out of here fast.

After that incident today, I'm not sure all of this is worth it. Why should I be that one special guy to be a hero? I'm no hero at all. Investigators all over the country are looking for me because they didn't find my body at the scene of the explosion. Maybe it'd be better if I turned myself in. Maybe things would be easier to take that way. My costume was charred to no mending, and I thought that material could take any kind of use, but was wrong. Just as I was wrong at the lab when the explosion occurred, I should have stayed and faced the consequences. Maybe I'd have been better off. Now--there's the doorknob. I wonder who--maybe they've finally caught up with me.

Why, it's remarkable! It's a perfect fit! It's as though the person who made it knew my exact size! It's unbelievable! And mysterious! Maybe I shouldn't, but I'm going to wear this costume and just wait for the results. Maybe I'll be able to find out who Mr. X is, and what he has up his sleeve. But all I can do is wait, and wait, and wait until I find a clue. And when I do, I'll hunt down Mr. X until I find him. Then he'll answer to Hyperman.

Later...........

So, in a turmoil of intrigue and mystery, the figure makes a vow to unlock the door of mystery and to find out who is the mastermind behind this strange and mysterious plot: As the new Hyperman!!!!!
When Dr. Fredric Wertham started his fight against crime comic books, EC, as it was the largest company, was under the heaviest fire. But, was EC really as evil, corrupting, etc., as the good (?) doctor had said? I don't think so. Oh sure, EC had a bit of unnecessary blood and gore, but in contrast to other companies, it was small.

There is a fine line between what is art and what is cheap, horror, blood, and sex. 50 GIRLS 50 in Weird Science #20 could hardly be called 'cheap'. The team of Al Williamson, Roy Krenkel, and Frank Frazetta did one of the most beautiful jobs in comic history on this one. Every panel was a masterpiece, every figure was of art school quality. Every page was inked with lines so fine that even EC's reproduction couldn't pick them up.

EC had the best line of artists in the history of comics. Wood, Williamson, Krigstein, Krenkel, Frazetta, Torres, Crandall, Orlando, Davis, Ingles, and Evans: each one a master of pencils, inks, and anatomy.

Had the art - each panel - been displayed as a sketch or even as a finished work at an art show, it would have won ribbons; but it was published in (oh horrors) comic books and, therefore, trash.

Typical comics from other companies of the same time were poorly done, and out to make a quick buck, to say the least. Art was out of proportion, overloaded to sickness with blood and cheap sex. Always inks with a heavy pen line, it takes too much time to use a fine pen. Heavy tones of sadness were usually there in great numbers. Girls being beaten, locked in trunks, and thrown in rivers--always bloody and sometimes dead. Backgrounds were usually fast, thick brush strokes, going anyway they choose, making an even sloppier panel than it was originally. Stories were written by disinterested writers who wanted a pay check. The endings had as much snap as a soggy potato chip and usually had trite characters such as vampires, werewolves, and other favorites.

This was horror to cringe at---to make a person wake in a cold sweat.

The average science fiction comic of that day (with the possible exception of the unknown Avon group, who Orlando and Wood often did stories for, and who published some of the best fantasy ever in comics; and St. John's titles, that Joe Kubert illustrated) were nothing but space cowboy-and-indian things, filled with pseudo-scientific garbage about "retro corbin gentrifiers", princesses of the lost planet Blumgah, and poor story lines. EC's were always adult, with plots that ran easily.

Stories that ANALOG would be proud to print; and the Bradbury adaptations.

In 1956, after releasing the Picto-Fiction, black & white magazine sized books, EC died, leaving only MAD to carry on the once proud tradition. And in eight years that company would sell out to National Periodicals.

But was it right that they should have died with the fly-by-night companies? The same companies that took EC's sled and ran themselves into a grave?

EC lost money on some titles and said so in their mags, but they were that one outfit in many that tried to do something good with their mags, but Dr. Wertham and his blind band of flunkies, the PTA act, need a scapegoat--anyone, anything to blame current problems on--and they found one.
